

Keeping Cool a Cinch with Do it Yourself Car wash

The Summer months are upon us, and there are still plenty of things we need to get done. Between work, carting our kids to swimming lessons and mowing the lawn, the list of tasks may seem endless. It is especially difficult to make ends meet in regards to money, now that the price of electricity has gone up and it is far more costly to run our air conditioners and fill our swimming pools. In light of all this, there are ways to cut down on spending and one little thing that can help stretch your money is washing your own vehicle.

If you would like to wash your car, you need to make sure you have all of the car wash supplies that you need. A source of clean running water is the first thing you will need to wash your car. If you have a backyard hose with a sprayer, it should work just fine. Be sure to park your car as near to the hose as possible so you can be sure it will reach all the way around your car.

Next, you will need a bucket of some sort, which should be big enough to hold about two gallons of water. Also, you will need some soap, which is probably the most important aspect of your car wash supplies. Make sure that you buy soap specially made for car washing rather than household detergents which could damage the finish on your vehicle.

A good sponge is necessary to get the soapy water onto your car from the bucket. Some folks like natural sponges, while others prefer a synthetic sponge. Either of these are fine, and can be purchased at most grocery stores. I have seen recommendations for two separate sponges to be used, one for the wheels and one for the chassis, if you would like.

It is a good idea to at least dry off the outside windows, if not the entire car, after rinsing. Using a household glass cleaner with paper towels to wipe down the inside of the windshield and windows is ideal. Protective rubber spray to keep your tires from cracking can be a good investment. Tire spray will keep your rubber from cracking and weakening in the heat.

Waxing your car can make it look even more shiny after washing. Car wax can be purchased along with other car wash supplies in most retail stores. Waxing can take a while, but the results are beautiful. Not only does wax protect your paint job, it enhances the colors and sheen to make it stand out. There are so many great car wash supplies to choose from for do it yourself jobs. Washing your own car can be a surprisingly fun way to save money.
